

Letter from DDOLL to State Ministers of Education, 4 December 2017

Attachment 1, Listing of Members of DDOLL Supporting the Phonics Check

The Developmental Disorders of Language and Literacy Network group (DDOLL) is a group of reading researchers, academics, specialist reading support and literacy teachers, speech pathologists, classroom teachers and parents which was set up in 2003 through a grant from the Australian Research Council's research grants scheme Research Networks. The aim of the DDOLL group is to disseminate information about the investigation and treatment of developmental disorders of language and literacy that uses sound scientific methodology and evidence-based research. The group includes members from Australia as well as the UK, Canada, New Zealand, Singapore, and the United States.
